Dear Bob:

It was a pleasure speaking to you in New York. I regret that I was unable to join you in your suite. New York is the home of my parents and many close friends and I dedicated my evenings to my wife and to them.

When I returned, I found all of the information that you had sent. I spent yesterday reading it and have modified a report which I am now completing to take this data into account. Also, the paper on the amobarbital study is now being retyped and I will shortly send you a draft for your study. Thank you for your help.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M. D.
Professor of Psychiatry
