Dear Walt,

I am pleased to accept the appointment as consulting editor for the series, Recent Developments in Psychopharmacology.

You ask for suggestions for the initial volume, and while I do not yet know the range of topics already committed, I would suggest you consider a chapter on the application of quantitative EEG to the classification, identification and dose-response measurement of new and presumed psychoactive drugs. This method has had some interesting applications recently, and deserves more exposure.

If the idea is of some interest, I could send you a copy of recent publications and an outline of a possible contribution.

Again, my thanks for the invitation.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M.D.
Professor of Psychiatry
