Dear Pinchas,

I missed you in Prague, hoping to see you again. The meetings were quite interesting, although too large with too many simultaneous sessions.

Recently, I became interested in sulpiride when a friend mentioned your studies - suggesting that this compound may not fit the EEG classification. As you know, I am most interested in continuing EEG studies in new drugs, and I am writing to ask if you would favor me with some data. May I have any recent summaries of your work with sulpiride? In what cases do you now find it useful, and at what dosages?

What are the profiles of sulpiride in patients? Has any volunteer data been reported?

Do you think another EEG study may be useful?

I will be grateful for your advice. My best regards to your wife and associates.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M.D.
Professor of Psychiatry
