Dear Dr. Taylor:

Enclosed is a draft copy of our report to the A.M.A. on July 14. It represents a distillation of our experiences with the antagonists cyclazocine, and naloxone, and with tybamate and methadone. The data is not original, and it should be considered for what it is - a summary of experience and published reports. Thus, publication as a special summary may be appropriate; but not as an original article.

It was a pleasure to participate in the symposium. I was also pleased to read that the AMA voted to allow specialty sections to continue responsibility for the meetings. This should stimulate better programs.

My regards.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M.D.
Professor of Psychiatry
