

February 24, 1987

David A. Casey, M.D.
Department of Psychiatry & Behavioral Science
University of Louisville School of Medicine
Norton Psychiatric Clinic
P.O. Box 35070
Louisville, Kentucky 40232

Dear Dr. Norton,

We have not published a case report of the use of ECT in patients with NMS. Our experience, however, led one of my associates at Stony Brook, Lawrence Greenberg, to write a letter which we published (Convul. Therapy 2: 61-62, 1986). A copy is enclosed for your information.

There have been a few case reports of the use of ECT in NMS, and a few reviews of NMS as a syndrome, but no comparative study has been brought to my attention. I enclose a copy of the citations in our files with regard to NMS and ECT; it may be of use in your report.

I also enclose copies of our information for authors and a publication release which must accompany all reports submitted for publication.

Thank you for your interest. I look ofrward to reading your report.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M.D.
Editor

P.S. If Dr. Denber still is a regular visitor to your facility, please give him my regards.