Dear Mr. Ling:

Separately, I am sending you a complete file of the data and data analyses for our study of GP-41299 vs. placebo in out-patient anxious neurotic patients. The study is an outgrowth of our EEG studies, which indicated that GP 41299 exhibited profiles similar to doxepin.

This study assessed the "anti-anxiety" component of the drug. We were unable to examine the antidepressant features, but look forward to reports by others who may have been encouraged to assess this feature.

We are submitting the summary for publication to Arzneimittelforschung. The study was monitored by Edgar Grunwaldt and Wilma Harrison, and I have sent them copies of the summary report.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M.D.
Professor of Psychiatry
