Dear Quentin:

I am not often compelled to write letters following meetings, but both Martha and I felt that you had done an unusually fine job in your presentation last night. One of the more rewarding features of St. Louis has been the compatibility of thinking which I have found expressed in various centers. Back East, expressions such as yours would have been followed by flat perfunctory approval. The enthusiasm of the audience was as rewarding as the content of your speech.

I look forward to hearing more of your studies and would be delighted to extend the facilities of the Institute.

My best regards.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M. D.
