Dear Leo,

It would indeed be an honor to have the data of the EEG studies included in your forthcoming review. Separately, I am sending some reprints which span the past decade as well as three discussions which summarize the most recent views, and a preprint of the computer approaches which interest us presently. While I do not think that the last is relevant, perhaps the direction would be of particular interest to you.

I do not know how much space you wish to devote to this subject, but perhaps you would like to know that I am writing three separate reviews of this very large problem in response to different requests sent to me in the past six months. In each review I am taking a different tack. Perhaps I could write a few paragraphs as the basis for inclusion in your report if you would pose the questions which face you.

The subject is of deep interest and commitment, and I would be willing to assist in as accurate a presentation of the present knowledge as I am able, if you would but feel free to ask.

Incidentally, I would be pleased to receive a preprint of your review after it has been accepted by the editors.

My best regards.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M.D.
Professor of Psychiatry
