Dear Fritz,

A few weeks ago I received a call from the managing editor of Comprehensive Psychiatry, Mr. Michael Aronson, asking whether it was possible to reduce the text of the EST review article. He was reluctant to publish the text without the citations, and agreed with your determination that the text and citations were too long. He asked whether 6 pages of the manuscript could be deleted.

I examined the text and by reducing the discussion, deleting some redundancy, clarifying some paragraphs and simplifying sentences, I reduced the text from 35 to 24 pages. I did, however, add seven additional citations.

I enclose a copy of the revised text, as well as the working copy from which the text was retyped. The latter is sent to give you an idea what had been deleted. If the paper still meets your approval, please let Mr. Aronson know. I have sent him a copy of the revised text.

Many thanks for your cooperation. My very best regards.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M.D.
