

January 8, 1973

Charles E. Wells, M.D.
Coordinator of Residency Training
Vanderbilt University
Department of Psychiatry
Nashville, Tennessee 37232

RE: Mr. Heywood W. Zeidman

Dear Dr. Wells:

Early in his school career at New York Medical College, Mr. Zeidman applied for summer work in this division. At that time we were involved with the study of novel narcotic antagonists and he carried out chemical assays and also interviewed patients. During the subsequent years, he volunteered for a number of experiments as a subject, in our assay of new psychotropic drugs.

In his relationships I have always found him to be bright, cooperative, enthusiastic, and dependable. He worked well with my staff and with the patients. I believe he would make an industrious and enthusiastic trainee.

As he expressed an interest in psychopharmacology and because of my high opinion of the program at your University, I was instrumental in suggesting that he apply for further study with you.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M.D.
Professor of Psychiatry

MF:ig