Dear Dr. Muller:

Thank you for your letter requesting information about the computer analysis of evoked responses. During the past few years, we have carried out few studies with the evoked response, and in general have followed the descriptive method that most workers use in evaluating the output of the CAT computer.

For this reason, I do not think that our methods are of any special value to you. I may suggest, however, that further information regarding the analysis of evoked responses can best be obtained from Dr. Charles Shagass at Temple University in Philadelphia.

Thank you for your interest.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M.D.
Professor of Psychiatry
