Dear George:

It was a distinct pleasure to turn the pages of "Medical Tribune" and find you and your collection described. It is strange because this very week-end our friend, Martin Green, spent the week-end, and in reminiscing about "home" we had the occasion to discuss our relationship with you. On the few occasions on which I visited your home, I was impressed by your taste and it is a pleasure for the profession to realize that some of us have tastes beyond the mundane.

Since leaving Great Neck, there have been many changes in my life. The most important is the opportunity to develop a research center. Missouri is making a strong bid to help its mentally ill and I am excited to be a part of it.

With all best wishes.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M. D.
