

November 4, 1988

Norman Endler, Ph.D.
Department of Psychology
York University
4700 Keele Street
North York, Ontario, Canada M3J 1P3

Dear Norman,

Yes, the meetings in Philadelphia were quite good, and much better than I had hoped for. It was indeed a celebration, despite the protesters, who seem to have made their greater mark on the press, and seemingly little on the participants.

Yes, I have received a copy of ECT: The Myths and the Realities; thank you.

As I reported earlier this year, I am committed to so many projects that I can hardly get to my clinical work; but I will do what I can to contribute the requested chapter.

My best regards.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M.D.
Professor of Psychiatry

May 26, 1988

C. Douglas McCann, Ph.D.
and Norman Endler, Ph.D.
Department of Psychology
York University
4700 Keele Street
North York, Ontario, Canada M3J 1P3

Dear Dr. McCann and Norman,

While I seem to be committed to so many projects that I can hardly see the top of my desk, I will do what I can to contribute the requested chapter later this summer.

What is not clear to me is the intended audience. The chapter titles are too diverse to be of interest to the practicing psychiatrist or psychologist; and too unfocussed to be attractive to the research/academic type. Students of psychology? Laity? Please advise.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M.D.
Professor of Psychiatry