Dear Warren:

This morning I received a most remarkable citation! Very few things have come to me recently which have given me such pleasure or stimulated my imagination so much. I do not know what fantasies a "Kentucky Colonel" stimulates in others, but for a New Yorker who grew up in a lower middle class community, the idea of such an honor is so unique that it really was both inconceivable and unattainable.

When you indicated in your previous letter that I might anticipate something in the future, I was inclined to think that your associates were pleased by my presentation. The symbol represented by your certificate was much greater than any tangible gift.

I enjoyed my visit to Louisville very much, and want to take this opportunity to thank all of you for your warm reception and stimulating interest. Thank you very much.

My best regards.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M. D.
