Dear Dr. Remarque:

First, let me take this opportunity to thank you for a most interesting visit and a delicious lunch. I have sent the material to Dr. Brazier as you suggested, and a carbon of my letter is enclosed.

I have also had the opportunity to speak to Philip Bradley. I told him of the optimism with which you met our proposals to publish the symposium and indicated that any of the methods we discussed would be agreeable to me.

I also took the liberty of telling him of our conversation regarding the list of editors of Brain Research. I would be honored to participate in such a venture and would be pleased if he would support the question you raised.

Since leaving you, I have thought much of the need for more definitive publications concerning computer methods for EEG analysis. While I would be pleased to contribute to Dr. Brazier's review, I believe the applications to psychopharmacology are of sufficient merit that I would like to bring this material together during the next few months and present it to you again for your consideration when it has a structure which is more generally applicable.

Again my thanks for your courtesy. I look forward to working with you.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M.D.
Professor of Psychiatry
