

*To letters
LIJH-Hillside*

May 3, 1979

Dr. Gerald Roskin
LIJH- Hillside
Glen Oaks, New York 11004

Dear Dr. Roskin,

It was kind of Dr. John Kane to invite me to lecture at Hillside in April, 1980, and I had looked forward to that meeting. What was not clarified in my discussions with him were the topic of the session and the reimbursement and fees. I believe he assumed that you or your office would handle these details.

As I indicated in our conversation, the customary fee for such lectures is $350, and expenses. Fees are waived for institutions in the Office of Mental Health of the State of New York and post-graduate teaching sessions of the University. It was a surprise to me that the invitation was based on some agreement that no fees would be paid to the staff at Stony Brook. Since I am not a member of the LIJH faculty, nor a party to the agreement which you enunciated, the usual conditions of lectures will apply.

Unless I hear otherwise, I will assume that the invitation has been withdrawn.

Thank you for your time, and please thank John Kane for his kind invitation.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M.D.
Professor of Psychiatry