Dear Lou:

When I returned from my vacation I found that Dr. A. Don had been called away to Europe because of illness in his family. He will not be available during the forthcoming divisional meeting. Unfortunately, some of his more recent data which has been collected in an additional dozen subjects was in the midst of analysis when he left and I am unable to complete these in time for the meeting in order to provide confirmation of these observations.

As I was acquainted with his study, I have taken the liberty of editing the manuscript which he left for me. The revised copy is more consistent with the established experiences. While I am taking some risk, I will ask a member of my staff to read this revision rather than the original draft sent to you.

I look forward to having you in St. Louis and to your comments during the meeting.

Sincerely yours,

Max Fink, M.D.
Professor of Psychiatry
